

We are pleased to announce the upcoming INTERROUTE&VILLE trade show, and the first IDRRIM Congress, taking place from 2 - 4 October 2012, in Lyon, France.

This event is dedicated to urban and inter-city roading and transport infrastructure. Spread over 15,000 m² of exhibition space, it will bring together over 250 exhibitors promoting the international excellence of French roading technology.

This benchmark event in France has been organised in conjunction with the first IDRRIM (the French Institute of Roads, Streets and Infrastructure for Mobility) Congress. During this technical value added congress, over 700 French and international delegates will be discussing the topic: "Preserving existing and preparing future land-based transport infrastructure."

Administration representatives, political decision-makers, elected representatives, project managers and contractors, architects and engineering consultants working in sustainable mobility and regional planning will come together for three days at this event.

Today the trade show and congress, closely linked to current concerns about regional planning and the rapid growth of cities, are more committed than ever to the philosophy of sustainable development which, in France, is being developed by the state and the local authorities.
